Moment of Truth

Partner Mindset Techniques

What were the 4 Partner Mindset Techniques I applied in the story?

When do you say, "Yes, but...!" For example, "Yes, but, I have the right to defend myself in this situation!" Where could you give up the right to defend yourself, or even give up the desire to be right, in order to get a positive outcome? Suppose you miss an important meeting with a colleague and discover that you marked down different dates in your calendars. He implies you got the date wrong. You know for a fact that he got it wrong. In the meeting he was to share some information necessary to complete an important project. Instead of insisting he made the mistake, you choose to reply, "I may have confused the dates. Are you available to speak on Wednesday morning?"

List particular people or situations when it is tempting or even enjoyable to point out how wrong they are:

What could you gain if you give up the need and desire to be right? By taking responsibility in the colleague example, the relationship is undamaged. It's possible that the colleague will also take responsibility for confusing the dates. By preserving the relationship, you get what you want: the much needed knowledge to get the project completed.

How can you respond in Partner ways where you give up the desire to be right?
